Compiled on a weekly basis since January 2007

Gilani's Gallopedia is a weekly Digest of Opinions in a globalized world - one window on global opinion polling compiled by Gilani Research Foundation

Who are we?

Gilani's Gallopedia is a weekly digest of opinions in a globalized world. It provides a one window access to Global Opinion Polls on a weekly basis. It is produced by a team of researchers led by Dr. Ijaz Shafi Gilani, and is a not for profit public service. It is co-edited by Mohammad Zubair and Rushna Shahid.

Gilani's Gallopedia is in a way the 'wikipedia' for global polling. We plan to make it an interactive platform where you are both reader and contributor. ❖

(Global Poll) The world's Muslim population is expected to increase by about 35% in the next 20 years, rising from 1.6 billion in 2010 to 2.2 billion by 2030, according to new population projections by the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life. Globally, the Muslim population is forecast to grow at about twice the rate of the non-Muslim population over the next two decades- an average annual growth rate of 1.5% for Muslims, compared with 0.7% for non-Muslims. A majority of the world's Muslims (about 60%) will continue to live in the Asia-Pacific region, while about 20% will live in the Middle East and North Africa, as is the case today. Muslims will remain relatively small minorities in Europe and the Americas, but they are expected to constitute a growing share of the total population in these regions. In Europe as a whole, the Muslim share of the population is expected to grow by nearly one-third over the next 20 years, rising from 6% of the region's inhabitants in 2010 to 8% in 2030. The Muslim share of the U.S. population (adults and children) is projected to grow from 0.8% in 2010 to 1.7% in 2030, making Muslims roughly as numerous as Jews or Episcopalians are in the United States today. Topic of the week:

Political Aggression In Poland

► This page is devoted to opinions of countries whose polling activity is generally not known very widely or where a recent topical issue requires special attention.

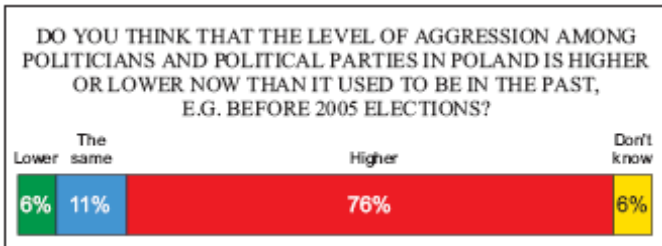

November 2010

For some time now, Polish political life has seen the growth of verbal aggression. The language used by politicians in public debates and discussions involving representatives of major political parties is becoming ever more offensive.

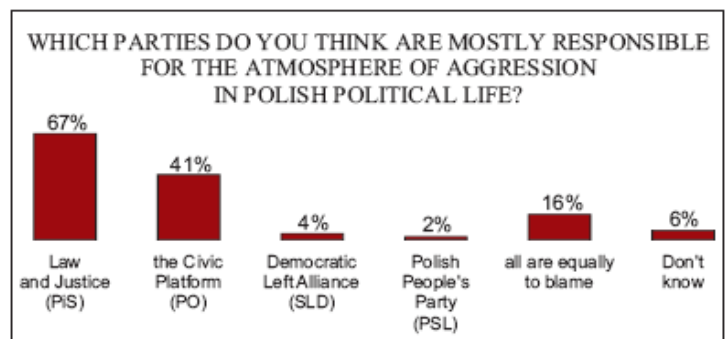

Recently in Poland, Marek Rosiak (Law and Justice party, PiS) was shot in his Parliamentary Office in Lodz, Poland. Mr Rosiak was an assistant of Janusz Wojciechowski - a member of the European Parliament. Many people see this tragedy as the result of the growing aggression in politics.

Others however, downplay the incident, emphasizing the fact that the person who committed the crime was, most probably, mentally unstable. According to over half of respondents (58%), political aggression is more common in Poland than in other countries with well established democracy.

A vast majority of Poles notice the growth of aggression in political life that has taken place in recent years. As many as three quarters of respondents (76%) believe that it is higher now than in the past, for instance before 2005 elections.

The parties mostly responsible for the growing atmosphere of aggression are, according to the respondents, Law and Justice (PiS) and the Civic Platform (PO). However, the prevailing opinion is that Law and Justice is far more to blame. Only a small percentage of people claim that Democratic Left Alliance (SLD) and Polish People's Party (PSL) create this atmosphere. One in six respondents blame all the parties equally.

More information about this topic can be found in CBOS report in Polish: Political aggression in Poland, November 2010. Fieldwork for national sample: November 2010, N=999. The random address sample is representative for adult population of Poland. §
