634-01 80% Indians want the government to expand the Coronavirus testing capacity (Click for Details)

(India) While most people applaud the government's actions in areas concerning the pandemic, many think it needs to ramp up its efforts around COVID-19 testing. YouGov's latest survey reveals that the majority of Indians want the government to test more for the novel Coronavirus. Notably, a higher number of Baby Boomers (92%) and Gen X (85%) respondents want the government to take this action as compared to the younger GenZ (68%) and millennial (79%) respondents. Likewise, tier-1 city (86%) residents are more likely than people from tier-2 (82%) and tier-3 (73%) cities to suggest this action.

(Pakistan) In a Gallup & Gilani Pakistan National Survey conducted in the year 2007, respondents were asked "During the past year, have you administered polio drops to the children in your household during any polio campaign?" In response, 76% said yes claiming they had administered polio drops to the children in their household during a polio campaign while 24% said no. Comparative Picture: This question was asked again in 2020 to enable a comparison to be made across the years. In 2020, 81% said yes, while 19% said no.

634-03 More than half of UAE & KSA residents are worried about a loved one contracting the Coronavirus (Click for Details)

(UAE) Although fear about personally contracting the virus has stabilised over time, worry about a loved one getting sick is a top concern among residents. With an uptick in the number of infected cases, governments in the UAE and Saudi Arabia have extended lockdowns and curfews in many cities in order to contain the Coronavirus outbreak. As people are settling at home and practising social distancing, data from YouGov's ongoing COVID-19 monitor shows fear among

634-04 COVID-19 POLL RESULT RELEASE \(Click for Details\)

(Nigeria) NOIPolls conducted its second public opinion poll on COVID-19 to gauge the perception of Nigerians regarding awareness, lockdown order as well as ascertain the level of concern in the country. The poll result revealed that almost all adult Nigerians (99 percent) are aware of the outbreak of corona virus disease in the country. Trend analysis shows a significant 15 percent increase in the proportion of Nigerians who are aware of the outbreak when current results are compared with figures obtained in March. It is shocking to know at this stage that some Nigerians (6 percent) consider the COVID-19 outbreak in Nigeria to be fake. (NOI Polls)

634-05 Who are the Britons working from home? \(Click for Details\)

(UK) The past weeks have seen many Britons' working lives completely up-ended by the coronavirus, with many being told to work from home – a completely alien concept for some. YouGov Profiles data shows that 40% of workers (equal to 28% of the general population) think they could do their job from home, compared to 54% (38% of the general population) who think they couldn't. Those who think they can work from home are likely to be younger, with 43% of workers aged between 25 and 39 saying they can work from home, compared to 35% of workers over 55. Men are slightly more likely to say they can (42% of male workers compared to 38% of female). (YouGov)

634-06 How are British drinking habits shifting under lockdown? (Click for Details)

(UK) YouGov Plan and Track data shows that while pubs and restaurants are closed, the demand for alcohol among Britons persists. The continuing COVID-19 outbreak has turned the world on its head, with no sector or market left untouched. The alcohol sector has changed dramatically, with beloved pubs closed due to the national lockdown. But are Britons drinking at home instead, or simply giving up the booze? YouGov Plan and Track data shows that the desire for alcohol itself has not changed, despite the closure of pubs and restaurants. The number of Brits saying they are likely or very likely to purchase beer and cider brands, and alcoholic brands as a whole, remain relatively steady. (YouGov)

634-07 Do the public think the police have gone too far? (Click for Details)

(UK) With the lockdown now entering its third week, there has been an increase in criticism of some police actions and tactics, such as drone footage being released of a couple out walking their dog. We have asked two questions on the topic. Firstly, we ran a question last Tuesday which found that just 10% thought the police were enforcing the lockdown too harshly, with around half (46%) thinking their reaction was about right, and a further 29% thinking they were enforcing it too lightly. Secondly, a poll for Crest Advisory, ran at the end of last week found that a higher number (38%) thought the police had either gone too far in certain circumstances (32%) or were generally going too far (6%). 634-08 COVID-19: Healthcare workers fear policies risk infecting new patients (Click for Details)

(UK) Nearly two in five healthcare workers are having to treat patients both with and without coronavirus, and only 14% have good access to PPE – prompting fears of spreading the disease through hospitals. New YouGov research shows that 37% of patient-facing healthcare workers have tended to both patients with and without suspected or confirmed coronavirus in the past two weeks. This figure is especially high among NHS staff (43%) and, in particular, NHS hospital staff (48%). Most healthcare workers who have worked with both categories of patients believe it puts those who don't yet have the disease at risk. Over two in five (41%) say the risk to patients is significant, while 35% say it's moderate. (YouGov)

634-09 COVID-19: Which services do Brits consider "essential"? (Click for Details)

(UK) A new YouGov poll reveals that while 98% say that supermarkets and pharmacies are key services, they're less sure that other businesses – including some the Government have allowed to remain open and trading – count as 'essential'. For example, while Alan Titchmarsh recently argued that garden centres qualified as an essential service (and that shutting them could damage the nation's mental and physical health) only 17% of Brits agree. More than three quarters (77%) consider them non-essential. (YouGov)

634-10 Americans Slow to Adopt Low-Contact Services Amid Crisis \(Click for Details\)

(USA) With an estimated 95% of Americans currently under stay-at-home orders of some kind, restaurants, stores and healthcare companies across the country are offering customers opportunities for low- or no-contact services. However, Gallup finds that most Americans have not been using these services, which typically allow the public to comply with social distancing guidelines while obtaining essential goods and services, more often than they did a month ago. Picking up takeout food from a restaurant is the service that the most people, 28%, say they have been doing more often in recent weeks.

634-11 U.S. Investors Sitting Tight but Expect Slow Market Recovery \(Click for Details\)

(USA) The majority of U.S. investors -- those with $10,000 or more invested in stocks or bonds -- see the current stock market environment as a time to hold what they have and wait for the market to come back. Meanwhile, far more see it as a time to purchase more stock while prices are down (34%) than as a time to decrease holdings to protect from further losses (4%). While investors' broad reactions to the market climate have remained the same over the past three weeks, the percentage viewing it as a good buying opportunity has slipped five points, from 34% to 29%. At the same time, the percentages saying it is time to hold or sell stocks have each increased slightly. (Gallup USA)

(USA) Seven in 10 Americans now believe the U.S. economy is in either a recession (40%) or a depression (30%). The combined percentage has increased by 12 percentage points in the past week, and by 15 points since Gallup's first measurement in late March. Americans' current assessments of the economy are strongly influenced by their partisanship, with Democrats much more pessimistic than Republicans. Eighty-five percent of Democrats say the economy is in either a recession or depression, compared with 68% of independents and 53% of Republicans. (Gallup USA)

634-13 Eight in 10 in U.S. Experiencing Significant Disruption \(Click for Details\)

(USA) Eighty-one percent of U.S. adults say their lives have been disrupted either a great deal (33%) or a fair amount (48%) by the coronavirus situation. The percentage experiencing at least a fair amount of disruption has increased from 56% in March 13-15 interviewing. Most of the change occurred between the first and second week of polling, with little movement since then. Americans expect the disruptions to continue for longer than they did in mid-March. Currently, 19% believe the disruptions will continue for "a few more weeks," down from 37% in March 13-15 polling. Twenty-two percent -- up from 13% -- expect them to last the rest of the year or longer. The majority of 59% expect disruptions to last a few more months. (Gallup USA)

(USA) While a plurality of Americans (43%) say the new coronavirus most likely came about naturally, nearly three-in-ten (29%) say it most likely was created in a lab, according to a Pew Research Center survey conducted from March 10 to 16, 2020, as part of the Center's nearly yearlong Election News Pathways project. Around a quarter of adults (23%) say it is most likely that the current strain of coronavirus was developed intentionally in a lab; another 6% say it was most likely made accidentally in a lab. A quarter say they aren't sure where the virus originated. (PEW)

(USA) The American family is changing in many ways: Cohabitation is on the rise, more adults are delaying or forgoing marriage, a growing share of children are living with an unmarried parent, and same-sex marriage is legal in all 50 states. Amid these changes, three-in-ten U.S. adults think it's a good thing that there is growing variety in the types of family arrangements people live in, while about half as many (16%) say this is a bad thing. The largest share(45%) don't think it makes a difference, according to a Pew Research Center survey conducted in June 2019. (PEW)

634-16 Extra 1.4 million Australians out of work in wake of COVID-19 pandemic – 3.92 million \(27.4% of workforce\) now unemployed or under-employed \(Click for Details\)

(Australia) The COVID-19 Coronavirus pandemic hit the Australian economy hard in mid-March when Australia's Federal, State and Territory Governments began introducing restrictive social distancing and self-isolation rules to stop the spread of the infectious virus. The early signs on the new restrictions are good from a public health perspective as the rate of new cases has substantially reduced over since restrictions began to be introduced in mid-March. However, the restrictions have also had a huge impact on the employment situation of many Australians – particularly in customer focused industries such as hospitality and retail businesses that have largely shut-down. 634-17 International COVID-19 tracker update: 11 April (Click for Details)

The country that stands out most this week in YouGov's 26-market COVID-19 tracker is Indonesia. Despite the nation having ordered large scale lockdowns in between the previous and most recent surveys, attitudes towards the crisis actually seem to be getting more relaxed. Most notably, the proportion of people saying they are very or fairly scared of catching coronavirus has fallen by 10 percentage points since the last survey, to 75%. Additionally, across all behavioural changes we are tracking Indonesians are now less likely to be taking precautions. The most marked difference is in avoiding physical contact with tourists, with the number of people doing so falling from 63% to 48%.

People in Japan, the U.K. and Australia are most negative about a recovery by June. Optimism over the coronavirus outbreak coming to an end in a few months has declined in most countries surveyed by Ipsos since March in the latest global poll. In mid-March, majorities of people in most countries surveyed believed the COVID-19 crisis was a relatively short-term crisis which would be resolved by June, and life would return to normal. This optimism has continuously declined in about half the countries polled since March 12-14 as citizens appear to be settling in for the long haul. In a survey of 28,000 people across 15 countries conducted from April 2 to 4, the respondents most negative about a recovery by June are in Japan (19%), the United Kingdom (27%), and Australia (32%). With more than 1 million confirmed cases of COVID-19 worldwide and counting, many residents confined to their homes for the foreseeable future are relying on the internet as their link to the outside world. Gallup surveys in 145 countries and territories in 2019 and early 2020 show more of the world is online than ever, but there is still a digital divide. Since its inception, the internet has exploded in popularity, rapidly becoming a tool for work, education and leisure. As recently as 2015, half of the world's adults reported having access to the internet in some way, including those connecting through a mobile device. This number has risen in recent years, with 56% of adults globally reporting the ability to get online in 2019, an increase of six percentage points over the past two years. \(Gallup USA\)

Thousands of confirmed cases of COVID-19 have been reported across Southeast Asia, with the highest levels, thus far, occurring in Malaysia, the Philippines and Indonesia. The disease is virtually guaranteed to continue to spread in the region, despite widespread efforts to prevent it. Responding to the situation in Southeast Asia will mean relying on high levels of trust in medical professions that a Wellcome Global Monitor survey shows existed before the pandemic, while building trust in health advice from the government, which is relatively low in a number of countries, including Thailand and Vietnam. ## GILANI'S GALLOPEDIA DEVELOPS A ONE WINDOW DIRECTORY OF WORLDWIDE POLLS ON COVID-19

A modest contribution by Gilani's Gallopedia in support of the WAPOR initiative on COVID-19

Introduction:

The one window access to the polls available on COVID-19 since January has been updated. We have incorporated the COVID-19 Public Opinion Research that was published on WAPOR on April 16, 2020. We are also keen to network for any fresh polling. Please let us know if you find it helpful and where we might network with someone doing similar (possibly better) consolidation.

This activity is purely collegial and non-profit. Please check the disclaimers on Gilani's Gallopedia website.

Synopsis:

In week one of the directory (April 01 – April 07) 219 polls were accumulated. In week 02 the number of polls rose to 280 after the addition of 61 polls. The countries polled rose to 58 after the addition of 02 different countries during the week. The newly added countries for the current week are marked in green, and the repeated countries with new polls added are marked in purple. The polls touch upon the following key issues: General awareness about the virus, perceived threat, impact on daily life, satisfaction with government responses to the situation, and financial impact of Coronavirus. Links are available for those with further interest. We hope to update this exercise on a weekly basis.
